THE LINK TRAINER (right) — Shut in the Trainer, simulating flight, Capt. Knighton "avigates" to a given destination. The "ship's" movements are recorded for study, insuring precision navigation.

"FLYING LABORATORY" (left) — Capt. Shrader checks the ship's progress while Capt. Knighton flies "blind"—seeing only through the "eyes" of flight instruments and radio.

IN A B-LINER (right) — With vision of all landmarks and horizon cut off Capt. Knighton demonstrates "under the hood," the accurate instrument flying acquired by these studies.
