BEAUTIFUL COSTA RICA

Directly north of Panama and the Canal Zone, in an area about the size of the state of West Virginia, is the Republic of Costa Rica.

Discovered by Columbus in 1502 on his fourth and last voyage to the New World, Costa Rica today has a population of almost one million people, predominantly white and of Spanish descent. Only 4% of these are descendants of aboriginal Indians who, for the most part, live in rural communities away from the populated urban centers.

With its majestic mountains and expansive plateaux, its rolling hills and verdant fields richly clothed in a rainbow mantle of orchids, irises, poinsettias, lillies, and innumerable other flowers of variegated colors and descriptions, this beautiful republic of Costa Rica is indeed a land of unending delight and attraction to its welcomed visitors.

SAN JOSE

Situated on a central plateau, where cool temperatures and ideal climate prevail the year round, San Jose is the major attraction for both tourists and vacationers. As the chief city and capital of Costa Rica, this thriving metropolis is renowned for its beautiful buildings and magnificent monuments. Of especial interest to visitors is the truly gorgeous orchid garden—the "Jardineria La Mil Flor," or the garden of a thousand flowers. This nursery is famous the world over for its exceptional collection of orchids.

Sometimes referred to as the "Paris of the Americas," San Jose through its attractive theatres, hotels and nite clubs offers diversified entertainment and amusement for pleasure seekers.

Devotees of outdoor sports may witness thrilling exhibitions of Soccer, the national sport of Costa Rica. These exciting games are played in the National Stadium, and the contests are enthusiastically supported by thousands of ardent fans.

Excellent fishing and hunting are found in the hills and seaport towns of Puntarenas and Golfito. The La Catalina Holiday Cabins are also a great attraction for those who enjoy outdoor activities.
